To manage your site, visit the site administration.

Default.aspx – what you will see if you have no homepage designated or when there are pending database updates.

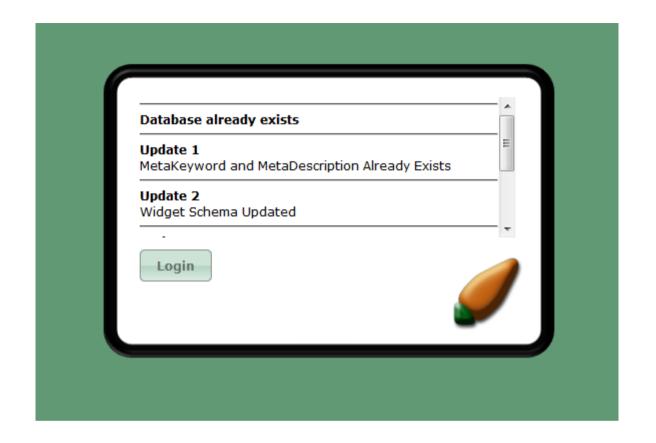

If you have a valid database connection string and have not applied the database scripts to your database, the system will deploy the database for you if the SQL credentials are dbo (database owner). If there is no CMS user configured, you will be taken to a wizard to create your first administrator account.

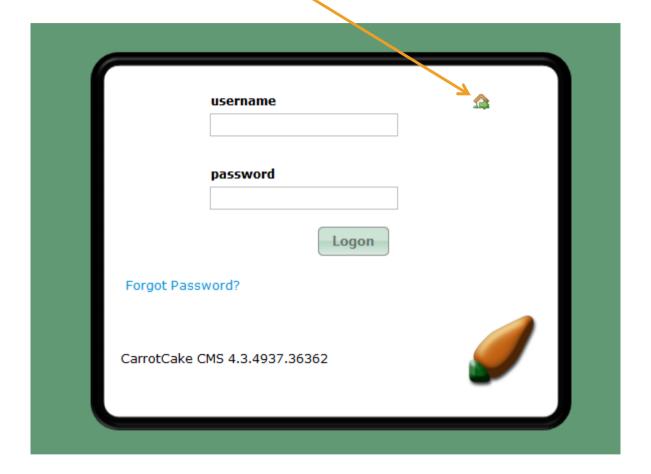

You should log out of the CMS prior to deploying updates to an existing site. If you have pending database updates and visit the logon page, you will be given a list of updates applied. Once applied, you can then login to the system as usual. If there are errors, the background of the change list will turn pink.

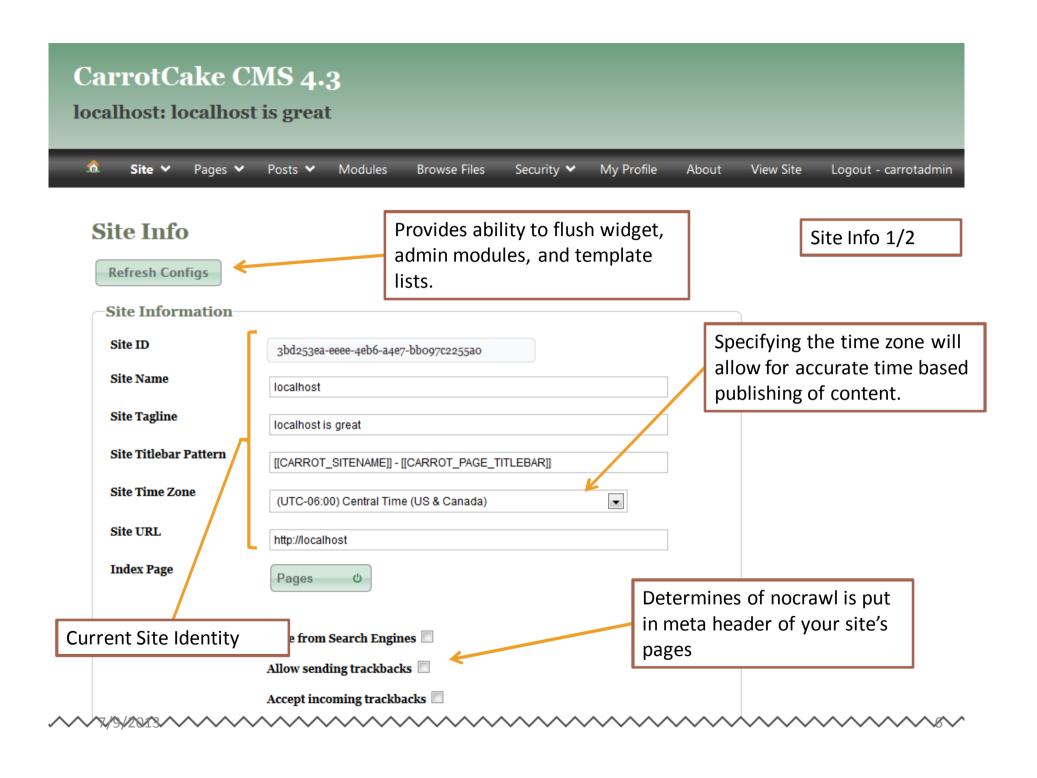

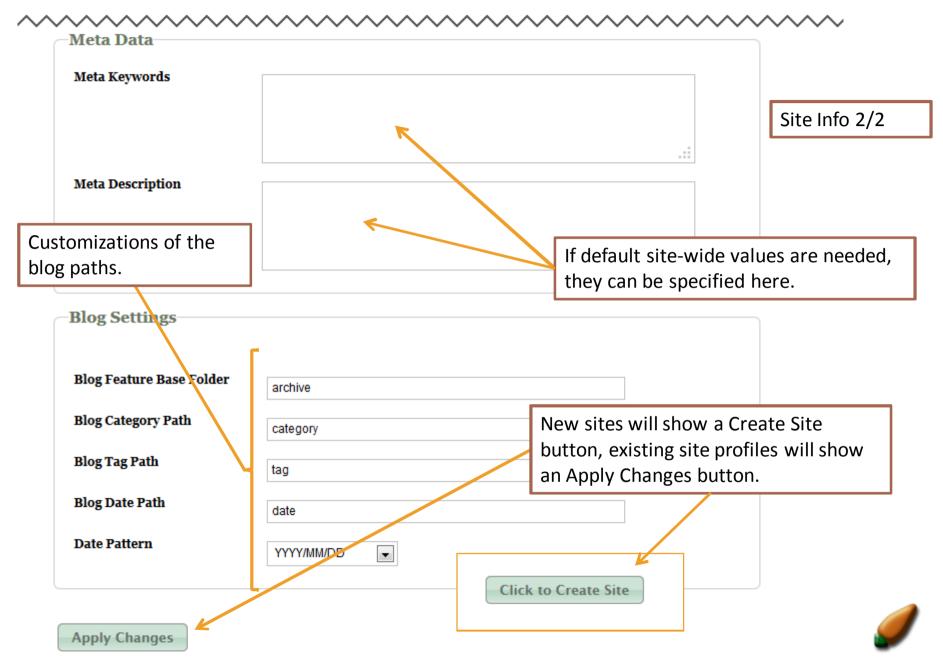

This icon links back to the home page of the site.

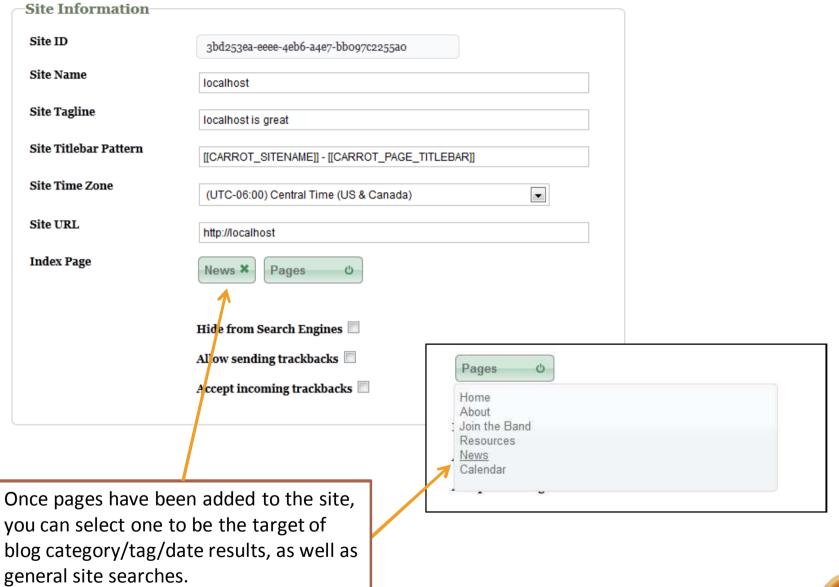

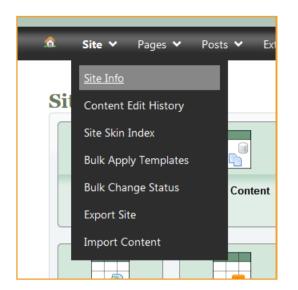

Login screen

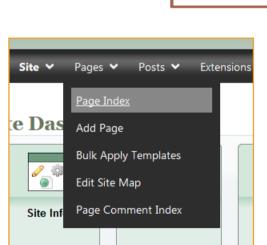

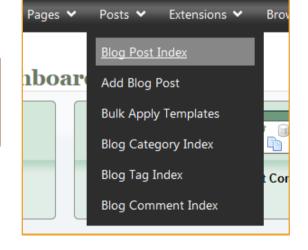

Use the "Site" menu to import (native or wordpress) or export content, apply templates by content type/level. The Home icon will take you to the site dashboard.

Use the "Posts" menu to access site blog posts and perform bulk updates templates/skins.

Use the "Pages" menu to access site content pages and perform bulk updates templates/skins.

Site Dashboard

When you login to the admin area (and aren't redirected to a page you requested before you logged in) you will be taken to the site dashboard where various common actions will be listed for quick access.

To reach this menu at any other time, just click the "Home" icon in the far left of the navigation menu bar.

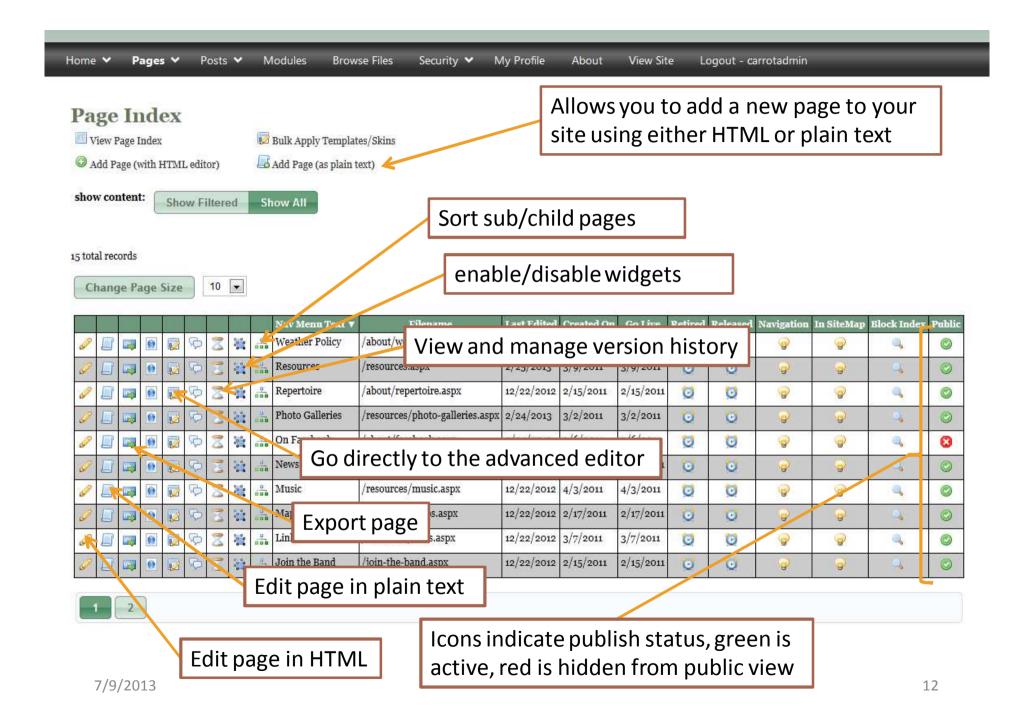

If you decide to change the whole appearance of your website, you can bulk change the templates used to render the site by selecting any available template from the list based on a generalized profile, such as Home, Site/Blog Index, Content or Blog page etc.

The Home Page and Index template selection will pre-select to their current value as there is only one page of either type. Other options must be manually selected.

You can also select the site index page at the same time as defining it as having a different layout template.

If you want to update the entire site to have the same appearance on every page, just pick this option.

Bulk Apply Templates/Skins

When previewing a template, you can close, without applying it or apply it if you are happy with the appearance. You can also roll between multiple templates until you find the one you want to use.

Once you are satisfied with your changes, click save. Clicking cancel will abandon your changes and take you back to the inactive edit version of the page. When your content has been saved, a confirmation screen will appear. The cancel button will prompt you with a similar dialog to prevent accidentally leaving the page with unsaved changes.
